What is Amos House?

Amos House, a transitional living facility, serves the greater Danbury area, offering women and their children the chance to get off the streets and map out a clear path to independent living. The house is not a shelter. It is a program where residents obtain life skills; allowing them to overcome personal and sometimes steep hurdles. This may include:

- Therapy to manage the anxiety, depression and stress so common for women and children who have contended with homelessness via trained counselors
- Support Groups specific to substance abuse, sexual abuse, or physical abuse moderated by professionals
- Job Skills including application, training/re-training and career management
- Budgeting skills and money management
- Parenting skills, including children with disabilities
- Nutrition counseling
- Family Management including nurturing healthy relationships, recreation, day care selection, and parent/teacher relations
- Life Skills including peer relations
- Transition Assistance including housing applications
